Corinne Azzolino

March 18, 1930 – December 24, 2024

Corinne Azzolino passed away on Christmas Eve. She was the daughter of John and Martha Kenneally and was proud of her roots as an ICBM (Irish Catholic Born in the Mission). Corinne was born and raised in San Francisco, graduating from Star of the Sea High School and later San Jose State College in 1952. After a short career as a Stewardess (aka Flight Attendant) with TWA she married John Barry and raised four boys, Sean, Mike, Kevin and Jim, all of whom have survived her. She is also survived by her brother, Jack Kennelly, six grandchildren, Dennis, Bridget, Erin, Shannon, Keelin and Sean Barry, and three great grandchildren, Aurelia and Zoey Barry and Poppy Lopez.

In addition to raising her sons, Corinne was a legal secretary finishing her career with Cooley Godward in San Francisco. In 1991, she married Joe Azzolino and together they lived full lives with their families and traveled all over the world, including China, Russia, much of Europe, and ultimately toured six continents.

She and Joe were big Bay Area sports fans, and in particular they were Cal

Bears football season ticket holders for decades. Their support of the Bears included traveling to numerous Bowl games, but sadly none of their Bowl game trips included the Rose Bowl.

Their travel also included spending about half of their time at their second home in Carnelian Bay at Lake Tahoe. Among other things she loved were the Tahoe beaches as she was often one of the last to leave on a warm summer day.

Throughout her life she was an immensely kind and loving person with a sharp sense of humor that stayed with her through her last days. She however, didn't find too much humor in the calls she received earlier in her life from the nuns at St Dunstan's Catholic School describing the misbehavior of her sons. All lies.

In summary, she will be sorely missed but well remembered for her 94 eventful and impactful years. Her life will be celebrated at noon at the Back Forty Restaurant in Pleasant Hill on January 11, 2025.
